Developments

January was a mixed month for the financial markets, with the S&P 500 declining 1.02%, while small cap stocks and credit markets generated gains. The month began with unprecedented political turmoil in Washington and spiking COVID-19 cases. As the month progressed, case growth slowed, although new strains and vaccine concerns weighed on investor confidence. Biden was sworn in as President without incident and the new Administration initially focused on vaccine distribution and additional fiscal stimulus. Near month end, unusual trading activity in some securities led to heightened volatility and widespread risk reduction. The VIX Index finished the month at 33.9, up significantly from 22.75 at the beginning of the month. Interest rates moved higher, with the yield on the 10-Year US Treasury rising 15 basis points to finish the month at 1.07%.

The SSI Convertible Investment Strategy started the year with a positive January, gaining approximately 2.64% (gross of fee), which was ahead of the S&P 500 but behind the 3.04% return of the ICE BofA All US Convertible Index (VXA0). The Strategy performed very well in 2020, gaining approximately 50.99%. During January, Industrials and Consumer Discretionary were the best performing sectors in the portfolio, while Telecom and Transportation were the weakest. Equity sensitive convertibles outperformed balanced securities and bond substitutes. New issuance totaled $7.5 billion in January, which was a healthy start to the year.

Policies

SSI's policies for valuing portfolios, calculating performance, and preparing compliant presentations are available upon request.

The Composite & Benchmark

The Convertible Investment Strategy (composite created January 1983) is invested in convertible bonds and convertible preferred stocks, and do not have credit quality restrictions. The Strategy may hold 144A securities. The composite contains fully discretionary accounts including those no longer with the firm. SSI believes a performance comparison versus the ICE BofA All Convertibles Index (the "VXA0") is appropriate. The VXA0 measures the return of all U.S. convertibles. SSI does not hold all convertibles in the VXA0 and may also hold convertibles that are not included in the VXA0. The Strategy is less diversified than the VXA0. The volatility of this strategy may be greater than the volatility of the VXA0 as the strategy holds a smaller number of positions than the Index. The return, if any, above the VXA0 is dependent upon SSI's discretionary management. Any other indices shown are not necessarily comparable to SSI's Convertible Investment Strategy. These are widely recognized market indices that are shown for informational purposes only. The composite name was formally known as SSI Outright Discretionary Convertible Strategy from 1/1/1983 – 3/31/2016 and on 4/1/2016 the new composite name became the SSI Convertible Investment Strategy.

Use of Leverage, Derivatives, and Shorts

The strategy may invest in synthetic convertible bonds and convertible preferred securities. Synthetic convertible securities are generally issued through an investment bank and may provide exposure to the credit of the bank while being linked to the equity upside of an entity we select, that is generally not connected with the bank. The synthetic convertible securities we employ do not generally involve the use of leverage and generally do not provide leveraged exposure.

Investment Management Fees

Returns are presented gross and net of management fee. Actual results of an individual account may be materially different from the performance shown herein because of differences in inception date, transaction and related costs, investment guideline restrictions, fees and other factors. All performance is based in U.S. dollars and reflect, on a percentage basis for each of the periods indicated: (a) the net increase (decrease) of all SSI Convertible Investment Strategy portfolios, dollar-weighted, including adjustments for unrealized gains and losses, the reinvestment of dividends and other earnings, the deduction of investment costs except any separate custodial or related fees, time-weighted to adjust for additions and withdrawals, and (b) the net increase (decrease) of the VXA0.

Net performance is reduced by SSI's actual investment management fees. Gross performance does not include deduction of SSI's investment management fees.

If performance is gross of management fees, client's actual return will be reduced by the management fees and any other expenses which may be incurred in the management of an investment advisory account. See SSI's Form ADV, Part 2A for a complete description of the investment advisory fees customarily charged by SSI. As an example, an account with an initial $1,000,000 investment on January 1, 2003, earning a recurring 5% semi-annual gross return (10.25% annualized), and paying a .5% semi-annual management fee (1% annual fee) would have grown to $1,340,096 on a gross of fees basis and $1,300,392 on a net of fees basis by December 31, 2005 (3 years).
